The driving force behind North Korean cinema is Kim Chŏng-il. He is fascinated with the production of films and most of the films created in North Korea may not be screened without his consent. As a result, North Korean films share some common themes such as the promotion of socialism, its legitimacy, the importance of unity and emphasis on collective successes, and anti-capitalism as well as the deification of national leaders, namely, Kim Il-sŏng and Kim Chŏng-il. Below are a few examples of films held at the University of Toronto that share these themes and are also among the recommended titles that the Korean Film Council (KOFIC) selected.

NKV-1:  ```
Minjok kwa ummyŏng
Vol. 1-47 (Total: 39 tapes)
Release Date: 1992-Present
Director: Ch’oe, Sang-gŭn, Kim, Min-ho et al.
```
This multi-volume film series is in production to date. It dramatically portrays prominent figures and events post-1945 as well as labour class strife in North Korea.

NKV-42:  ```
Kkot p’anŭn ch’ŏnyŏ
Release Date: 1992-Present
Running Time: 130 min.
Director: Pak, Hak, Ch’oe, In-gyu
```
One of the most popular films in North Korea written by Kim Il-sŏng himself. It is the film version of one of the five great North Korean revolutionary operas. It is about a young girl from a poor family who ends up punishing the evil landlord who mistreats her family by joining the revolutionary struggle.

NKV-46:  ```
Toraji kkot
Release Date: 1987
Running Time: 97 min.
Director: Cho, Kyŏng-sun
```
This film portrays the gap between life in cities and the countryside as a social problem, and promotes the idea of protecting the rural hometown. This is portrayed through a character’s nostalgic memories of an old love that was never realized as a result of abandoning his hometown for the city life.

NKV-98:  ```
Chosŏn ŭi pyŏl
Vol. 1-3
Release Date: 1980-87
Director: Ôm, Kil-sun, Cho, Kyŏng-sun
```
This is a typical film portraying the process of anti-Japanese struggle and revolution during the 1920s and 30s, focusing on the glorious acts of the North Korean leader Kim Il-sŏng and his loyal followers.

The University of Toronto has one of the most substantial collections of North Korean film materials in North America.

The University of Toronto’s Cheng Yu Tung East Asian Library offers a collection comprised of 107 film titles: 61 feature films and 46 non-fiction films.

This North Korean Film Collection includes 26 of the 50 recommended titles that Korean Film Council (KOFIC) selected in 2001 as representative works of North Korean cinema.

Non-fiction films include:
1) Documentaries
2) Cultural and/or performance-themed videos (e.g., musical productions, background footage for sing-along video, and stage performance of popular bands)
